Speaker: Mark Steyn - an interview by Peter Robinson of the Hoover Institution

Topic: America Alone: The End of the World As We Know It

Together. . .yes, we can enjoy a speaker/interview and follow it with a discussion via conference call. See Page 4 for how we are going to do it.

It's the end of the world as we know it...

Someday soon, you might wake up to the call to prayer from a muezzin. Europeans already are. And liberals will still tell you that "diversity is our strength" - while Taliban enforcers cruise Greenwich Village burning books and barber shops, the Supreme Court decides sharia law doesn't violate the "separation of church and state," and the Hollywood Left decides to give up on gay rights in favor of the much safer charms of polygamy. If you think this can't happen, you haven't been paying attention, as the hilarious, provocative, and brilliant Mark Steyn - the most popular conservative columnist in the English-speaking world - shows to devastating effect. The future, as Steyn shows, belongs to the fecund and the confident. And the Islamists are both, while the West is looking ever more like the ruins of a civilization. But America can survive, prosper, and defend its freedom only if it continues to believe in itself, in the sturdier virtues of self-reliance (not government), in the centrality of family, and in the conviction that our country really is the world's last best hope. Mark Steyn's America Alone is laugh-out-loud funny - but it will also change the way you look at the world.

Presidents' Report

Life, as we love it, has certainly been turned upside down, and in such a short period of time. Whether at first partially political, or from an excess of caution, the Bay Area has jumped on the pandemic control bandwagon and changed our lives, and not necessarily to our liking. With businesses closed, indefinitely at this time, the cost in lost revenue, taxes, and payroll is incalculable.

President Trump's ban on flights from China in January, as well as from Europe more recently, may very well have mitigated, to some degree, the illness and loss of life here. Of course, he was called a xenophobe and highly criticized at the time. As a club, we felt we were being overly cautious in cancelling the March luncheon when we did. A few days later it was mandated. What seemed excessive a couple of weeks ago, now appears to have been very prudent.

Our April fundraiser to benefit New Day for Children and American girls who have been recovered from sex trafficking will be postponed to the fall. This worthy organization assists those girls with scholarships and financial assistance, while they begin the long road of adjusting to being in a safe and secure living environment. We anticipate a great success!

As the year progresses, we will hope that the virus quickly abates, with a low loss of life, and does not return in the fall. If nothing else, this has highlighted the folly of turning manufacturing of necessities, medicines, etc. to any foreign power, much less a hostile one. And those pesky things called borders – well, it turns out they are important after all! A return of industries to America will be a silver lining during this stressful time.

So, combat cabin fever. Catch up with friends via email and phone. Read and enjoy television fare, laugh a lot, stay safe and healthy, and we will look forward to seeing each other when life returns to normal!

Jane Maushardt and Kathryn Thompson, Co-Presidents

Membership Matters

We would like to welcome our newest 2020 regular member Elizabeth Swanson and associate members Terry Avtonomoff and Lydia Jardine. Thank you for supporting us, and we look forward to seeing you at our monthly luncheons and Satellite evening events in 2020, once we are assured that we can safely resume both! As we are all acutely aware, a lot of our normal day-to-day activities have ground to a halt, while we wait out this shelter-in-place precaution in lieu of the Covid-19 pandemic. We as a club realize that there are members in the high risk categories, and we encourage all of you to stay safe and stay healthy. We need everyone strong going into this very important year, working on supporting and re-electing our wonderful president Donald J. Trump. While we are at home and looking for ways to stay busy and connected, we encourage you to talk/Skype/Facetime with friends and relatives and to keep the club in mind when the conversation turns to the magnificent job our president is doing in the handling of this evolving crisis. I think that his performance during this crisis could be a catalyst in moving many supporters to the Trump train, and could and should see an uptick in membership for MRWF. We need to keep talking and see if within those conversations they would consider joining the club in support. As of this writing, we currently have 89 regular members and 45 associate members in the club. We are continuing to collect renewal dues, so if you have yet to renew for 2020, please do so ASAP... as it seems we all have a little more time on our hands.

Remember that our regular membership dues have increased to $40 and our associate dues have stayed the same at $25. Associate members are women who belong to another Republican Woman Federated club, Republican men, and non-citizens. Also remember that our luncheon prices have increased slightly to $33 for members and $35 for non-members. This is due to the increase in cost passed on to us

The Long Fight Against Unjust Taxes*

By Amanda Foreman, The Wall Street Journal, 3/21-22/2020*

With the world in the grip of a major health crisis, historical milestones are passing by with little notice. But the Boston Massacre, whose 250th anniversary was this month, deserves to be remembered as a cautionary tale.

The bloody encounter on March 5, 1770, began with the harassment of a British soldier by a crowd of Bostonians. Panicked soldiers responded by firing on the crowd, leaving five dead and six wounded. The colonists were irate about new taxes imposed by the British Parliament to pay for the expenses of the Seven Years War, which in North America pitted the British and Americans against the French and their Indian allies. Whether or not the tax increase was justified, the failure of British leaders to include the American colonies in the deliberative process was catastrophic. The slogan, "No taxation without representation," became a rallying cry for the fledgling nation.

Fortunately for Americans, at this time of national duress, tax day this year has been mercifully postponed.

from the Club Restaurant at McInnis Park. We are always looking for new members, so please bring friends/family as guests to our luncheon/Satellite events.

We will continue our New Member contest for the 2020 year. The Member who introduces the most new women to our club and they join as regular members could be the winner and receive a prize at the end of the year. I challenge you all! This year we need it! Membership forms can be found in this newsletter or on our website. Click here www.mrwf.org, then click on Home tab. We continue to appreciate your commitment to MRWF. Please stay safe and healthy during this crisis. We look forward to all being together again soon.

We do not know when our next Satellite will be but when we schedule it, you will be notified.

In the meantime, here is a photo of the February Satellite and the whole group of us discussing how we will do 'a lot'.

Legislative Report

Is failure of the 2020 Prop. 13 a sign of a new tax revolt?

By Jon Copal

Date: 3/8/2020

<https://www.ocregister.com/2020/03/08/is-failure-of-the-2020-prop-13-sign-of-a-new-tax-revolt/?clearUserState=true>

The good Proposition 13 — the one from 1978, not the $15 billion school bond currently on electoral life support — was the beginning of the modern tax revolt movement.

That movement spread across the United States and even into Europe in addition to spawning several additional initiatives here in California. But it's the bad Prop. 13 on last week's ballot that is currently generating a statewide buzz because it appears to be headed for failure. Could this be the beginning of Tax Revolt 2.0?

The 2020 version of Prop. 13 was a massive $15 billion school facility bond measure, the largest such bond in state history. The Howard Jarvis Taxpayers Association led the opposition with a guerrilla-style campaign relying on a relatively modest $250,000 statewide radio buy, social media and nearly a hundred interviews with television, radio and print media. This was in comparison to the more than $20 million spent by Gov. Gavin Newsom and his allies.

Because there are millions of absentee and provisional ballots yet to be counted, it is possible that Prop. 13's losing margin will shrink. But no matter the outcome, politicians have been put on notice that voters are growing increasingly weary of hundreds of bond and tax measures confronting them at the state and local level in every election cycle.

Here's what taxpayers can take away from the March primary election:

The first is what we'll call the "Proposition 13 blame game."

Casting about for a reason to explain why Prop. 13 is failing, the author of the bond measure, Assemblyman Patrick O'Donnell, D-Long Beach, is blaming voter confusion. That is why we look forward to supporting O'Donnell's proposal to take Prop. 13 out of the ballot number rotation.

At HJTA, we have seen Prop. 13 used as a scapegoat for more than four decades. But if the bond measure fails, the blame will belong to Gov. Newsom, both for failing to properly gauge the California electorate and for cobbling together a strange mix of special interests to ride along on the bond's assumed passage.

The measure included language that waived local developer fees and increased local bond debt caps. Bond proponents reportedly begged him for a smaller bond that did not include funding for UC and CSU colleges, advice that was disregarded. Prop. 13 was constructed in a haphazard manner with late changes and add-ons, finally coming together just days before the legislative session ended. The governor became the face of the campaign. Voters were unimpressed.

Another trend to monitor is the widespread defeat of numerous local bond and parcel taxes.

According to data from the California Taxpayers Association, voters have rejected nearly half of the 236 local tax and bond measures on the March ballot and another 56 remain too close to call. This is a remarkable statistic considering the history of local revenue measures in California.

According to the website California City Finance, local revenue measures have had at least a 70 percent pass rate in all but two major statewide elections since 2012.

Local governments of all kinds are accustomed to these measures passing, but perhaps no more. One reason may be lack of voter confidence that the tax dollars they approve actually end up going where elected officials say they are going. Again, while many votes remain to be counted, it is undeniable that voters have delivered a statement that they are experiencing tax and bond fatigue, and they don't trust either municipal or state politicians to spend that money effectively. A second California tax revolt could be upon us.

March 3, 2020 Primary Election Results

By Allison Olson, CFRW Advocate

Date: 3/11/2020

The Primary Election results are in . . . almost. There are still approximately 1.7 million ballots unprocessed and outstanding in California (at time of print). This could dramatically change some current election results. Last election we had victories for some our candidates change after all the ballots were processed, and that could happen again. The California Republican Party is watching various races closely to ensure the integrity of our elections process is being upheld by our government. It is looking like despite the Democratic Presidential Primary, that Republican Voters turned out in large numbers. The California Republican Party deployed many new tactics this primary election to get out the vote, which included ballot harvesting, remote phone banking, digital targeted ads on social media, text messaging and more. These efforts will prepare us for November!

Who really needs to prepare for November is the Secretary of State and elections offices in counties around California. The number of unprocessed ballots a week after the election is ridiculous. On election day, 15 counties were unable to connect with the Secretary of State's online statewide voter registration database. There were many technical glitches in the same-day registration voting occurring throughout the day as well. In L.A. County there were lines as long as three hours waiting to vote. These errors are unacceptable and compromise the integrity of our elections! The legislature needs to demand answers from Secretary of State Alex Padilla and fix these massive errors before November.
