Speaker: Sally Zelikovsky

Political Commentator, Activist, and Columnist for American Thinker

Topic: What Our World Looks Like Now

Sally Zelikovsky lived in Marin for 14 years before returning to her native New Jersey in 2014. While raising her children in Marin, Sally got involved with the Marin GOP for a short time as an alternate, then started a private, conservative group to discuss politics that ultimately morphed into the San Francisco Tea Party and Bay Area Patriots. Sally quickly became an unofficial spokesperson for all things republican and conservative in the Bay Area, and a go-to political commentator for the San Francisco media. She published prolifically in American Thinker, The Marin IJ, The Washington Times, the San Francisco Chronicle, and Thoughtful Women. Her goal during the Tea Party years was to form a coalition among the various conservative groups in the Bay Area in order to give this minority a stronger presence, to present conservative points of view to the public in thoughtful ways and, most importantly, to give voice to the thousands of Bay Area conservatives who had been marginalized over the decades.

Sally has lived in Switzerland, Germany, and Russia, and has a degree in Economics and German from Washington University, a JD from Northwestern, and an LLM from Columbia.

She will speak to MRWF on her favorite topic. You will quickly be drawn into the issues we confront as fascinating and terrifying changes occur in the economic, cultural, and political landscapes.

Presidents' Report

Ladies!!! A call to action!!! We must all call and write our representatives to express our views on our current circumstances. Phone numbers are on the back page of the newsletter. Make a commitment for at least one phone call and/or letter per day! Here are the thoughts of your Co-Presidents. This letter is longer than usual, but we think warranted at this time.

We hope everyone is physically, emotionally, and spiritually well. This has been a difficult time for all of us on so many levels. We are grateful for technology that has enabled us to stay connected and "see" each other, even when we cannot really "see" each other! While frustrating, this has brought out humor, innovation, and an excuse to touch bases with friends that we may not connect with as often as we should in "normal," busier times.

Where to begin? There is so much that is perplexing about the past few weeks. In early March Jane had dinner with a top virologist from Stanford, who declared this virus was "not that bad," that its lethality was being greatly exaggerated, and that it was likely less dangerous than the flu. She could not understand the media hysteria, which was serving to truly frighten everyone. Shortly thereafter, we were all locked down.

We, of course, want to believe this is to protect our health. But . . . does it make sense that millions of private businesses have been shut down, but we have not heard of any government employee lay-offs? It is too dangerous to play golf or fish alone, but certain people can get their hair and makeup done for TV appearances. You can be put in jail for walking in the park, most of which are closed, alone with your child, but criminals are being let out of prison because of prison health risks. Michigan's governor says that even during lockdown,

Membership Matters

We would like to welcome our newest regular members Elizabeth Cunha, Emily Fiel, Kay Patterson, Elizabeth Potter, Victoria Schmidt, Elizabeth Swanson; and our new associate members Terry Avtonomoff, Nancy Chernoff, Chuck Eisenhower, Barry Gilbert and Fred Rudow. Thank you for supporting us, and we look forward to seeing you at our regular luncheons and satellite events once things get back to a new sense of normal here in 2020. To date we have 88 regular members and 45 associate members. Clearly in the wake of our current situation, our membership recruitment has stagnated. Although, I do think in the wake of this current situation, as you talk to friends and family members, especially those in Marin, and you are discussing the oppression and tyranny that we are experiencing under our beloved nephew of Nancy Pelosi, encourage them to become members or associates of our club. The barrage that our President is under is unprecedented and we will need all the support we can get, especially as we go into this election cycle in California. As you talk to people who are waking up to the tyranny, encourage them to be part of our club in the discussion. As an RN, right now working in three different capacities, I have a lot of input and welcome any and all of you to contact me with questions / advice etc. I look forward to the day when we can all resume our regular luncheon schedule. I think our "Governor" will try to prolong the restrictions of citizens' rights as long as possible, for obvious reasons, but unfortunate ones for us.

For housekeeping purposes, if you are a member, regular or associate, and have not renewed your dues, please do so ASAP, clearly we have some time on our hands. Remember that our regular membership dues have increased to $40 and our associate membership dues remain the same at $25.

Associate members are women who belong to another Republican Women Federated Club, Republican men, and non-citizens.

COVID-19 Crisis: Who Rules the "Experts"?

Real Clear Politics - April 19, 2020*

Claremont Institute's Ryan Williams responds to that question in a piece* that cites both constitutional amendments and the admonition, "States have broad 'police' powers to protect public health and safety" during times of lawfully invoked emergencies, and the powers are "rational rather than arbitrary" and "protect rather than damage private rights and the public good."

He continues: The ultimate judge of the government's stewardship of private rights and the public good in America is the people, who are sovereign.

Americanism

In a crisis like this, they should demand more circumspection and rationality, instead of overcorrection and panic, from their politicians.

There is no precise formula or roadmap to judge correctly in the coming weeks and months. No "expert" can decide the proper balance between safety, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. The American people have every right - even a duty - to resist the abuse of state power in defense of their God-given natural rights.

abortion is “essential to sustaining life.” Huh? It is too dangerous to go to your doctor or dentist, but you can go to the liquor store or marijuana dispensary. We can go to the grocery store or pharmacy but not to church or the polls in November. People have been arrested for attending church services while social distancing in their cars in an open field listening to their pastor, as well as while paddle boarding alone in the ocean. On this slipperiest of slopes, we find our civil rights have been dwindled down to “being allowed” only to stay in our houses and go to the grocery and drug store.

While our administration responded rapidly to early projections of virus casualties and requests by states, providing millions of “needed” safety items and thousands of ventilators and hospital beds, which have mostly gone unused, hospital workers all across America are being laid off because many of their normal functions, elective surgeries, for example, have been prohibited and patients are now afraid to go to hospitals. Most hospitals are quiet, as the number of virus cases is far below original projections and normal activities have waned. We are now sending ventilators to other countries that need them.

We find the discrepancies irreconcilable and quite scary. The rationale for the lockdown seems to have gone from “flattening the curve,” which has been accomplished, to “no more cases and needing a vaccine.” We have not been able to figure out why a vaccine should be a necessary condition of “release,” since we have flu vaccines already and still had an estimated 36 million cases of the flu nationally this year. The current number of projected deaths from the Wuhan virus is lower than the typical annual influenza deaths. Thankfully, the “powers that be” seem to be moving off that one, as well as the need to carry “papers” to prove we have been vaccinated. The left seems to want this to go on for months. It becomes easy to question motives and crazy not to.

In a very insightful interview with the governor of New Jersey, Phil Murphy (D), Tucker Carlson of Fox News asked the key question for all governors now after he described that fifteen congregants were arrested in a synagogue in New Jersey for being there together. “The Bill of Rights, as you well know, protects Americans’ right, enshrines their right to practice their religions as they see fit and to congregate together, to assemble peacefully. By what authority did you nullify the Bill of Rights in issuing this order?” Mr. Murphy responded, “That’s above my pay grade, Tucker. I wasn’t thinking of the Bill of Rights when we did this.” WHAT????!! Well, apparently neither did many other governors, including our own.

We, however, do think about the Bill of Rights as, we believe, do those reading this letter. We understand that there have been many deaths from this virus and are truly sorry for those who have lost loved ones. However, studies are showing that this virus is far more widespread than officially documented with a high percentage of those infected completely asymptomatic, meaning far more people survive this virus than in the published statistics. Dr. Birx, one of President Trump’s top medical advisors, admitted that patients who have other serious ailments when admitted to the hospital with the Wuhan virus who pass away are automatically counted as Wuhan deaths, overstating the virus mortalities. Not publicized in the mainstream media, there are now medications that are very successfully treating this virus. It looks like the Stanford virologist was correct and that, in keeping us “safe,” our leaders seem to be ignoring the science they claim to revere as well as our civil rights.

Our media’s frothy and often inaccurate coverage of this virus has disproportionately terrorized our citizens who have been made to feel it is their “duty” to think it is helping to close businesses and schools, lay off 26 million workers, and stay shut in at home living off food deliveries. We are amazed by how many people think this is all OK. Some might argue that staying at home was prudent early on when little was known about this virus, but now we know enough to lift the fear, protect the most vulnerable, go outside, and get back to work. We’re hoping that by the time this gets published in our newsletter, life will be getting back to normal.

Our best to all of you. Hoping to actually “see” you soon!

Legislative Report - California

Both Marin Assemblyman Levine and Senator McGuire voted 'For' this egregious legislation. Phone them.

Amid crisis, California diddles around with AB5 exemptions rather than face law's failure

By Vittorio Nastasi |

April 28, 2020 Orange County Register

Members of the California state legislature got plenty of warnings about the likely negative unintended impacts of Assembly Bill 5, which required companies to reclassify most independent contractors as employees. The law was hurt hurting workers and businesses before the outbreak of COVID-19, but now its negative impacts are being amplified by the pandemic. As unemployment skyrockets and the economic downturn worsens, California should repeal the law.

Assembly Bill 5 (AB5), commonly referred to as the "gig worker bill," originated in response to the California Supreme Court's ruling in Dynamex Operations West, Inc. v. Superior Court. The ruling established a three-pronged test to determine if a worker is an employee or an independent contractor in wage-order claims. All three components of the test can be difficult to satisfy but saying a worker must perform work that is outside the usual course of the hiring entity's business is most problematic.

For example, a clothing store could hire a plumber as an independent contractor to fix a leaky pipe but could not consider a seamstress making alterations to its products as an independent contractor—even if the seamstress worked from home and provided her services to other stores.

While AB5 included exceptions for some professional occupations like doctors, lawyers, and insurance brokers, a wide range of lower- and middle-income workers—from musicians to make-up artists—are being adversely affected now.

AB5 also included a limited exemption for journalists, allowing up them to write up to 35 articles annually for an outlet before being considered an employee. Vox Media provides one particularly ironic example of the bills unintended consequences. Shortly after the bill's passage, Vox published an article with a headline proclaiming that "Gig workers' win in California is a victory for workers everywhere." But, contrary to the alleged victory, the Associated Press reported, "Even before the law took effect, SB Nation, owned by Vox Media, announced that it was ending its use of more than 200 California freelancers."

California Assemblywoman Lorena Gonzalez, who pushed AB5, is now working on a deal to exempt musicians, singers, musical engineers, sound mixers, and others from the law. Gonzalez said they're giving the music industry flexibility "while protecting the right for musicians to have basic employment protections just like every other worker."

What about workers in every other industry who are being hurt by the law?

The Los Angeles Times reported that as of Feb. 28, well before the state's COVID-19 shutdowns and economic collapse, there had already been 35 bills introduced in the state legislature to make changes to AB5 — mostly to exempt various groups of workers from it.

If a law needs that many exemptions, it should just be repealed.

In part, AB5 was designed to crack down on ridesharing services like Lyft and Uber and food delivery businesses like Grub Hub. Amid the pandemic, those food delivery businesses are providing a vital service to Californians, playing a key role in keeping restaurants afloat as many states, including California, shut down dine-in restaurant service.

AB5 isn't just about the gig economy. It is limiting job opportunities for workers who have been laid off as a result of the pandemic and government-mandated stay-at-home orders. More than 3 million Californians have filed new weekly unemployment claims in the past six weeks and Gov. Newsom said the state has paid out almost $4 billion in unemployment benefits since mid-March.

AB5 was already bad policy, but its ramifications are all the worse in light of COVID-19 and the economic downturn. California should be making it easier for businesses and workers to adapt to our current economic and societal circumstances by doing away with regulations that are hampering our response to the public health crisis and economic recovery. Repealing Assembly Bill 5 is the perfect place to start.
